

High Road to Electric Bus Manufacturing in Los Angeles County: BYD-SMART

An Initiative of the California Workforce Development Board

California Workforce Development Board is paving the way for a High Road transportation sector and a greener future starting with the electric bus manufacturing industry in California’s largest county. This project will bring together a major electric bus manufacturer and employer, BYD Coach and Bus, with the union representing the workers at their production facility, the International Association of Sheet Metal, Air, Rail and Transportation Workers (SMART) Local 105, in a partnership with workforce developers and educational institutions to develop a pre-apprenticeship training program that will prepare the manufacturing workforce to meet the rising demand for electric buses in California and beyond.

Zero-emission electric buses are a critical component of California’s strategy for reducing emissions in the transportation sector. As transit agencies transition their bus fleets, demand for electric buses will grow significantly over the next ten years. Electric bus manufacturers like BYD will need a well trained workforce to safely and effectively meet their production targets. At the same time, this growing industry can provide high quality careers for local residents. In Los Angeles County, BYD and SMART Local 105 are part of a Community Benefits Agreement that includes targeted hiring commitments to ensure that the jobs, training, and economic benefits reach underrepresented workers, low-income communities, communities of color, and those with employment barriers in the region.
